Khine Khine Zaw

I am a professor and head of department of dermatology, University of Medicine (1) Yangon. I have been with university of medicine (1) Yangon for many years and could not have find better or more honourable university for which to work.

My background goes as follow: I earned M.B.B.S from University of Medicine (1) (1982 to 1988), After graduation, I worked as demonstrator in department of physiology in UM1. Then I went to Gunma University, Japan, as a state scholar student, where I earned PhD (Dermatology) (1995 to 2000).

During my scholarship period I worked in the lab of Prof Miyachi Yoshiki and Prof Ishikawa Osamu and together characterized a novel three-dimensional fibroblast culture system that gave rise to skin model in-vitro. I continued to do research in extracellular matrix metabolism and role of antioxidants.

When I came back from Gunma University after graduation, I persuaded my career in dermatology as a dermatologist.
